Beyond the rolling hills, buttes, scoria bluffs and small towns, history is what makes the Old Red Old Ten Scenic Byway come alive.

OLD RED OLD TEN SCENIC BYWAY

Slow down, take time and enjoy the drive

BY CARMEN DEVNEY

Ben Kubischta has been to the top of mountains and had his foot in the ocean. While they were amazing experiences, he'd prefer to go to Hebron and have a burger at the Brick City Bar and Grill on Thursday nights. The real draw for him is driving the Old Red Old Ten Scenic Byway, and supporting local businesses along the way.

"When we take the time to absorb the beauty and wonder, and farms and towns along Old Red Old Ten, we shouldn't be surprised to learn this is a place that people would want to visit," says Kubischta, who serves as board president of Old Red Old Ten.

Running 108 miles through much of Mor-Gran-Sou Electric Cooperative's service area, Old Red Old Ten is North Dakota's most important and historic road, according to Kubischta, who managed the scenic byway program through the North Dakota Department of Transportation (NDDOT).

Stretching between the anchor cities of Mandan and Dickinson, travelers will see spectacular views of buttes, creeks and farmsteads.

In 1912, the American Automobile Association hired Anton Westgard to go on a pathfinding tour and identify routes across the United States. He made three transcontinental trips from New York through North Dakota to Seattle, down to San Francisco, back to New York, and then to Los Angeles marking the route in a five-month period.

Westgard called the northern route Northwest Trail. By 1914 it became known as Red Trail, most likely for the red paint that was used in marking it. To encourage tourist travel, it became known as National Parks Highway. And in the 1920s when the state started marking highways, it was first ND 3 and then US 10.

Early automobile travel in the United States was tourist-related, because wealthy people had cars and could go on longer trips. Towns and entrepreneurs worked to secure the business tourists were bringing to their areas. Kubischta says the east-to-west roads across the United States were really important because that's where most of the commerce was going.

The Interstate system in North Dakota was developed to take the least amount of time and effort to build. It avoided rougher country when possible, and perhaps that's why some people say the view along the Interstate-94 is bland.

In comparison, just a short distance from the Interstate, Old Red Old Ten brings travelers close to buttes, streams, and the roadway geometrics of a time when travel was slower.

"When you drive this road, you can go back in time and get a feel for what the main highway was like prior to the Interstate," Kubischta says.

While it's a two-lane road rather than the Interstate's four lanes, most of Old Red Old Ten is paved and it doesn't take much longer to get from Mandan to Dickinson driving the scenic route.

The North Dakota Tourism department recommends stopping at these five attractions along the byway:

1. Mandan Depot/Five Nations Arts on Main Street in Mandan.
2. Salem Sue in New Salem.
3. Schnell Recreation Area near Richardton.
4. Assumption Abbey in Richardton.
5. Dickinson Museum Center in Dickinson.

In addition, there are many attractions and unique businesses in the towns along the byway including Almont, New Salem, Glen Ullin, Hebron, Richardton, Taylor and Gladstone. One of them is Dacotah Clayworks, a pottery store in Hebron.

Owner Robin Reynolds spearheaded the application process of getting Old Red Old Ten registered as a scenic byway. It is the tenth, and last, scenic byway to have been accepted into NDDOT's program. She was motivated to take on the role, because she's an enthusiast for blacktop, backroad driving, and she owns a business within striking distance of the Interstate — and travelers weren't stopping.

Her philosophy is similar to the cooperative business model. "What's good for one is good for all," she says. "This byway helps all the area communities — and my business."

Robin's father's parents were from New York City. They traveled from Helena, Mont., to New York City on Red Trail. When her dad was 8 years old, his family stayed at the Columbia Hotel in Hebron.

Robin grew up in North Dakota and moved out of state for 20 years, before returning in 1996. One day she decided to take a road trip, starting in Mandan and making her way west on Old Red Old Ten, just to see where it would go. At that time the blacktop had heaved and was broken in areas. While the drive wasn't ideal, she saw many unique attractions, like Lovers Cliff near Almont, Fort Sauerkraut in Hebron and the Little Badlands near Glen Ullin.

"The attraction for me is just being off the Interstate. That's number one on my list," she says. "Number two, I pull into some of the towns to see what is happening. If I need gas, I get gas, or get something to eat or do some shopping."

Rural residents in the Mor-Gran-Sou service area may travel to the anchor cities of Mandan and Dickinson for many of their needs.

"It's a good-neighbor act for the folks who live in the bigger cities to come to our towns, and do the same," she says.

The Byway Committee organizes two events to encourage people to drive Old Red Old Ten, and stop and support businesses and communities along the way.

The first is a bus tour of rural churches that have cultural and architectural interests along the byway. Depending on the status of Covid-19 at that time, the tour is tentatively scheduled for May. The second is the Old Red Trail rummage sale, which is the first Saturday in June. Check the Old Red Old Ten's Facebook page for updates on the status of both events.

Kubischta says early churches in North Dakota were built with love and paid for by people who did not have much money. The churches were gathering spaces for communities, and were an important part of the North Dakota prairies, where people lived and visited.

"Not only will you see the beauty of the churches on the outside, but if you stop and close your eyes and listen, you can hear conversations that went on in 1932. Farmers talked about their crops on Sunday mornings after the service, and wondered if it was going to rain. Wives organized potlucks and children played, and families celebrated births and grieved deaths. The romance of our lives is held in these churches," he says.

During the Old Red Trail rummage sale, residents in the small towns along the byway will offer sales on secondhand goods, as well as rural families along the way.

"It's a good way to experience small-town North Dakota," Kubischta says. Drive the scenic byway, stop in the small towns and shop the sales, and visit the local cafes and stores. You might have so much fun, you decide to come back and end up somewhere you've never been — like the Muddy Creek Saloon in Almont."

Ben Kubischta worked for the North Dakota Department of Transportation for 44 years. In the early 1990s, Congress passed a highway bill that established a scenic byway program on a state and national basis. North Dakota established its program, and the NDDOT was the responsible agency that partnered with North Dakota Parks to manage it. Kubischta oversaw the contract and worked with the program from the beginning of its inception until he retired in 2014. After he retired, he wanted to help a byway, and Old Red Old Ten was close to home. He currently serves as the board president.

Annual Meeting POSTPONED

UNCLAIMED CAPITAL CREDITS

The following list contains the names of current or former Mor-Gran-Sou Electric Cooperative members who have unclaimed capital credit checks that were mailed in December. These checks have either been received but not cashed, or returned to Mor-Gran-Sou by the postal service because they could not locate the members at the address on file. A further search by Mor-Gran-Sou personnel has not turned up their whereabouts.

If you know of the whereabouts of members on this list who received electrical service from Mor-Gran-Sou, please have them contact our office at 701-597-3301, 701-663-0297 or 800-750-8212.

Please keep in mind that not all of the capital credit amounts are large, but we would like to get these checks to the proper parties. Persons who wish to claim checks from the following list should be prepared to provide proper personal identification.

What are capital credits?

Mor-Gran-Sou Electric Cooperative is a nonprofit business. We exist only to provide goods and services to you, our members; not to make a profit for a shareholder or investor. Cooperatives are operated to provide at-cost electric service to their members.

When all the expenses are paid, the cooperative's margins are credited to you in the form of capital credits. As the financial condition of your cooperative allows, you are paid these capital credits. In the meantime, your capital credits are your equity in the cooperative.

Refunds are allocated based on the amount of business a member does with the cooperative – the more electricity used, the larger the capital credit check.

If you have questions about your capital credits or would like a more detailed explanation, contact Mor-Gran-Sou at 701-597-3301, 701-663-0297 or 800-750-8212.
